SUBMITTED BY MR. MATHIAS OF MARYLAND

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That (a) the Joint Committee on Printing shall publish and there shall be printed as a Senate document (with such illustrations and in such style and form as may be directed by the Joint Committee on Printing) a revised edition of the Biographical Directory of the American Congress for the period ending with the One Hundredth Congress (1774–1989). In celebration of the Bicentennial of the United States Congress, the revised edition shall be known as the "Biographical Directory of the United States Congress 1774–1989: Bicentennial Edition".

(b) The Historian of the Senate and the Historian of the House of Representatives shall provide appropriate biographical data and other material for the revised edition, including data for—

(1) Senators and individuals who have served in both the Senate and the House of Representatives, to be provided by the Historian of the Senate; and

(2) Members of the House of Representatives (including Delegates and Resident Commissioners), to be provided by the Historian of the House of Representatives.

(c) In addition to the usual number, there shall be printed 7,985 copies of the revised edition, of which 2,045 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 5,390 copies shall be for the use of the House of Representatives, and 550 copies shall be for the use of the Joint Committee on Printing.

Approved by the Senate November 12, 1985.

Approved by the House December 12, 1985.

Letter of Transmittal

The Joint Committee on Printing is pleased to present the bicentennial edition of the Biographical Directory of the United States Congress. This special edition includes valuable information about those individuals who served in the Continental Congresses, as well as about each man and woman who served in the First through the One Hundredth Congresses. It is an important and fitting addition to the various efforts commemorating the bicentennial of the Congress.

Since the 1928 edition of this publication, the Joint Committee on Printing has been responsible for its compilation and issuance. This particular edition, however, surpasses previous efforts because it represents the collaborative efforts and support of many other talented and concerned individuals.

Both the Commission on the Bicentennial of the Senate and the Commission on the Bicentenary of the U.S. House of Representatives, have supported the project vigorously. In addition, substantial support for the project was provided by the Secretary of the Senate, Walter J. Stewart, the Clerk of the House, Donnald K. Anderson, and the Clerk's Office of Printing Services.

More fundamentally, this edition has benefited greatly from the excellent editorial efforts of the U.S. Senate Historical Office and the U.S. House of Representatives Office for the Bicentennial. By their painstaking labors in researching and updating the biographies of the Members of Congress, Kathryn Allamong Jacob and Bruce A. Ragsdale have greatly added to scholarship about the Congress.

Finally, the outstanding efforts of Duane Nystrom and Gloria Weihs of the staff of the Joint Committee on Printing in compiling and maintaining basic biographical files, and in coordinating the printing effort, must be recognized.

To these and all of the others who have contributed to this fine effort, we offer the praise and thanks of the Joint Committee on Printing.

JANUARY 1989

Foreword

In March 1789, Senators and Representatives elected under the recently ratified Constitution of the United States assembled for the first time in the newly renovated chambers of Federal Hall in New York City. In this first session of the First Congress, 81 Members—59 Representatives and 22 Senators—from the 11 States then comprising the Federal union would take their seats. Many were veterans of the Revolutionary War, many were lawyers or planters, and some were merchants. Most had been born in one of the thirteen colonies, but a few were recent immigrants. Some, like New Jersey Representative Elias Boudinot, had only to cross the Hudson River to reach Federal Hall. Others, like Senator William Few from far-off Georgia, braved long and harrowing journeys to join their colleagues in New York.

Two hundred tumultuous years have passed since those heady early days at Federal Hall in 1789. With the opening of the One Hundred First Congress, the Senate and House of Representatives commemorate their bicentennial. In the intervening two centuries, Congress has moved from New York to Philadelphia, and finally to the District of Columbia. It has grown with the expanding nation. At the opening of the One Hundred First Congress, the small assembly of 1789 has grown to include 540 Members—440 Representatives and Delegates and 100 Senators—representing the fifty States, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the District of Columbia, Guam, and the Virgin Islands.

One feature of Congress that has remained constant over the years is that the Senate and House of Representatives are made up of individuals as diverse as the constituents who elect them. Since 1789, more than 11,000 men and women have served in the Congress of the United States. Some, like Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun, and Daniel Webster, were the heroes of their age. Myriad others have worked quietly behind the scenes to effect changes equally great. How better to celebrate the bicentennial of this great institution than with a biographical directory of all of its Members. The bicentennial edition of the Biographical Directory of the United States Congress is offered to the American people in the hope that it will promote a richer understanding of the contributions that the men and women of the Congress have made over 200 years of national growth, challenge, and change.

Introduction

The publication of this volume provides the first revision of the Biographical Directory of the American Congress since 1971. The present edition includes biographies of each of the more than 11,000 individuals who have served in the Congress of the United States since 1789 and in the Continental Congress between 1774 and 1789. In addition to the biographies of Senators, Representatives, Delegates, Resident Commissioners and Vice Presidents, this volume contains rosters of the state congressional delegations and elected officers in the First through One Hundredth Congresses. The work serves as a comprehensive record of the men and women who have served in the Congress of the United States during its first 200 years.

This volume, the Biographical Directory of the United States Congress 1774–1989: Bicentennial Edition, is the fifteenth in a series of such reference works published over the past 130 years. Charles Lanman, author, journalist, and former secretary to Daniel Webster, gathered the first collection of biographies of former and sitting Members of Congress for his Dictionary of Congress, published by J. B. Lippincott & Co. in 1859. Lanman intended his Dictionary of Congress, with its extensive appendix of information on other branches of the federal government, the states, and foreign emissaries to the United States, to serve primarily as a guide for sitting Members of Congress, much as the Congressional Directory functions today. Following the private publication of the first edition, Lanman sent complimentary copies to all Senators and Representatives and sought congressional support for subsequent editions. Entries in Lanman's volume reflected his care not to offend any potential patrons.

In 1864 the House of Representatives and the Senate approved the publication by the recently established Government Printing Office of an updated version of Lanman's Dictionary of Congress. In 1866 the House Committee on Printing failed to report a Senate resolution for publication of Lanman's latest revision. The Senate, nevertheless, approved the publication of Lanman's third update as a Senate document that included for the first time delegates to the Continental Congress. After Congress offered Benjamin Perley Poore, a journalist and clerk of the Senate Committee on Printing and Records, the job of preparing a Congressional Directory with biographical sketches and the kind of reference information found in the Dictionary of Congress, Lanman in 1868 prepared a new edition of his work for private publication by T. Belknap and H. E. Goodwin of Hartford, Connecticut. The poor sales of that volume and a further edition from the same publishers in 1869 induced Lanman to discontinue preparation of the Dictionary of Congress.

In anticipation of the centenary of American independence and in search of a market not served by Poore's Congressional Directory, Lanman prepared a Biographical Annals of the Civil Government of the United States, published by James Anglim of Washington in 1876. This volume combined the biographies of the Dictionary of Congress with entries for other governmental officials since 1776 and expanded reference tables. Poore offered a competing historical volume in 1878 with his Political Register and Congressional Directory, published by Houghton, Osgood and Company of Boston. Although Poore derived much of his biographical information from Lanman's work, he contributed the first references to party affiliation. Joseph M. Morrison's revision of Lanman's Biographical Annals (New York, 1887) was the final directory of congressional biography to be prepared and published privately.

In 1903 Congress authorized the publication of A Biographical Congressional Directory, 1774 to 1903. Compiled under the direction of O. M. Enyart, this was the first volume prepared by congressional staff who drew on the Lanman and Poore editions as well as biographical information printed in the Congressional Directory since the Fortieth Congress. A second Biographical Congressional Directory, 1774 to 1911, published in 1913, reflected the first serious effort to verify the information contained in the nineteenth-century directories. These initial volumes prepared by congressional staff represented an attempt to provide an authoritative historical record as well as a reference source for sitting Members of Congress.

The most thorough and systematic revision of biographical entries attempted prior to the present volume was conducted in preparation for the Biographical Directory of the American Congress, 1774–1927. Ansel Wold, chief clerk of the Joint Committee on Printing, directed the compilation of this volume published in 1928. In an effort to verify existing data and add pertinent information, the Joint Committee on Printing staff distributed questionnaires through postmasters in the hometowns of former Members, including those from the earliest Congresses. The resulting entries reflected the responses of governmental clerks, descendants, acquaintances of the Members, and local historians. This survey of the 1920s yielded more detailed and consistent biographies than had been found in the nineteenth-century editions or in the earlier volumes compiled by congressional staff. The frequent reliance on family legends and personal recollections, however, introduced dubious information into the volume. Congress authorized the Joint Committee on Printing to compile updates of the Biographical Directory of the American Congress that were published in 1950, 1961, and 1971. The entries from the edition of 1928, however, remained virtually intact in the three subsequent updates.

The creation of the Senate Historical Office in 1975 and the Office for the Bicentennial in the House of Representatives in 1983 provided the first opportunity for professional historians to revise and update a biographical directory of Congress. A printing resolution for a Biographical Directory of the United States Congress 1774–1989: Bicentennial Edition, approved by the Ninety-ninth Congress in December 1985, directed the Joint Committee on Printing to print an edition for which the Senate Historical Office would prepare all entries for Senators including the more than 600 House Members who also served in the Senate. The resolution charged the House Office for the Bicentennial with preparation of entries for all others who served in the House of Representatives since 1789 and for delegates to the Continental Congress. The Congressional Directory staff of the Joint Committee on Printing prepared updated rosters for Congresses since 1971. The Joint Committee also provided the Senate and House offices with drafts of biographical entries compiled since the printing of the 1971 edition.

The House Office for the Bicentennial and the Senate Historical Office have completed the compilation of entries for all Members through the One Hundredth Congress and reviewed all entries from previous editions of the Biographical Directory of the American Congress. The review of existing entries made clear the need for substantial revisions and additions in order to bring the new Biographical Directory into line with current historical scholarship and accepted standards of accuracy and consistency.

Earlier editions of the Biographical Directory and their nineteenth-century predecessors offered curiously little information on congressional careers other than term of service. In the present volume the editors have endeavored to provide a more complete record of the individual members' years in office. For the first time, entries include all standing committee chairmen in the First through One Hundredth Congresses and all major, formal leadership positions.

The most serious source of error and confusion in previous editions were the designations of party affiliation. Many of the party labels added to the editions of 1913 and 1928 were anachronistic, claiming for the two modern parties Senators and Representatives elected to Congress before the Democratic or Republican parties existed. Other entries ignored the frequent shifts in party affiliation during the nineteenth century or omitted reference to short-lived and regional political parties and thus failed to reflect the vigor and diversity of nineteenth-century politics. The present editors have reviewed all party designations in an effort to reflect contemporary electoral labels and current understanding of party development.

In order to guide readers to more biographical information than can be contained in these brief entries, the bicentennial edition includes bibliographical citations for all Representatives and Senators who have been the subject of scholarly publications. Entries note all Dictionary of American Biography essays and cite up to two other sources including biographies, monographs, journal articles, dissertations, autobiographies and documentary publications. In the cases of individuals with lengthy and wide-ranging careers, the citations focus whenever possible on congressional service.

The editorial staff has reviewed all entries in the previous edition of the Biographical Directory and where possible sought to verify data through comparison with other standard reference works and primary sources. In many cases the Biographical Directory is the only published record of former Members, and thus verification of the many standing entries based solely on family reports, oral traditions and local histories will be an ongoing project.

The editors have devised more nearly uniform categories of information in the biographical entries, a more consistent and logical sequence to the data presented, and more standardized phrasing. Although broad variations in individual entries and institutional differences between the House of Representatives and the Senate prevent absolute adherence to set categories, the editors have established a standard format as a guideline for preparation of the biographies.

Each entry begins with the individual's full name printed in bold type, followed by any nickname. The first reference is to the congressional office or offices held and the state or territory represented. Kinship to other Members of Congress is next noted in parentheses. Biographical data begin with the date and place of birth followed by a brief record of education, military service, and career before entering Congress, including occupation and previous political offices. Entries for Representatives include party affiliation, the Congresses to which they were elected, and dates of service. Senators' entries list party and dates of service. Dates of election are noted only in cases of special elections. Following the dates of service are leadership positions and committee chairmanships, with Congresses or dates of service for these positions listed in parentheses. Disciplinary actions such as censure and expulsion or other formal, congressional action concerning the Member appear next. The section regarding congressional service closes with an indication of unsuccessful bids for reelection, candidacy for another office, or retirement. Subsequent political offices and career positions are listed in chronological order. In keeping with the form established in the Biographical Directory of 1928, the date and place of death are followed by the place of interment. The city of interment is included only if it differs from the place of death. Whenever possible an appropriate bibliography is cited at the close of each entry.

The staff of the Joint Committee on Printing prepared revisions of the several reference tables that precede the biographies. In the section entitled "The Congress of the United States 1789–1989", each Senator and Representative is listed by State delegation in the rosters of the First through One Hundredth Congresses. Senators' names appear within each delegation in order of seniority. For the Fortieth through One Hundredth Congresses, Representatives' names appear in their respective delegations in the numerical order of their congressional districts. These rosters also note the method of representation used in the House. When each Member is elected from a specific, geographically-defined district, the delegation is listed simply as "Representatives". Delegations elected statewide on a general ticket and Members from states with a single seat are labeled "Representatives At Large". In delegations that consist of both district and at-large seats, the at-large Representatives are so designated following the list of Members elected from districts.

A table of apportionment of Representatives indicates the number of House seats granted each state under the constitutional apportionment of 1787 and following the reapportionments that reflected each decennial census. This table also indicates the total number of seats in the House of Representatives at any given time.

A section regarding the Continental Congress lists the places and dates of sessions between 1774 and 1789. Presidents of the Continental Congress are listed with the date of their election. The table of Delegates in the Continental Congress lists each state delegation separately and distinguishes between those who attended and those who were elected but declined to attend.

Since Lanman's original Dictionary of Congress in 1859, the various biographical directories of Congress have included a list of executive cabinet officers. For the present volume, the staff of the Joint Committee on Printing has updated this information.

The editing of this volume drew on the work and assistance of a number of scholars and offices, without whose help so thorough a revision would have been impossible. The challenging task of revising party affiliations drew heavily on the recent work of Dr. Kenneth C. Martis of the department of geography at West Virginia University. Martis's research for The Historical Atlas of Political Parties in the United States Congress, 1789–1989 (Macmillan, 1988) required examination of records from the more than 30,000 congressional elections held since 1788. From these records Martis determined the party affiliation of each candidate at the time of election to Congress. For the First through Twenty-fourth Congresses, a period of erratic party development and shifting alliances, Martis derived his party designations from behavioral analyses of congressional service as well as electoral data.

Martis and Macmillan Publishing Company generously permitted the House Office for the Bicentennial and the Senate Historical Office access to the data prior to the publication of The Historical Atlas. This information served as the basis for the revision of party labels that appeared in previous editions of the Biographical Directory. The present Biographical Directory includes all labels that reflect party affiliation at the time of election. For certain Congresses when Martis derived his data from analyses of voting behavior, the editors have omitted reference to party. Thus no designations are included for election to the First through Third Congresses before the identifiable organization of Federalist and Republican congressional campaigns. For the Sixteenth through Twenty-fourth Congresses, 1819 to 1837, Martis relied on behavioral analyses and only scattered newspaper accounts of electoral party labels. In 1819, at the opening of the Sixteenth Congress, the Niles' Weekly Register, a leading political newspaper published by Hezekiah Niles in Baltimore, abandoned its practice of listing party affiliations for the new Congressmen, explaining that "The difficulty of drawing lines of demarkation satisfactorily at this time, has induced us not to attempt it." Niles did not resume party identification for the entire Congress until the convening of the Twenty-fifth Congress in 1837. Following the example of Niles' Register, the Biographical Directory omits reference to party affiliations for almost all elections to the Sixteenth through Twentieth Congresses. For elections to the Twenty-first through Twenty-fourth Congresses, a period when Niles' Register and other newspapers published occasional reports of party affiliation, entries include party labels that can be identified as electoral designations. The final variation from Martis's data applies to elections to the Thirty-fourth Congress. In order to map elections of candidates representing the various parties and shifting alliances that developed after the demise of the Whigs, Martis classified as "Opposition" all non-Democratic candidates elected to the Thirty-fourth Congress. The Biographical Directory lists the Members' party affiliation at the time of election regardless of their later affiliations or alliances in the Thirty-fourth Congress.

The Congressional Committee Project, under the direction of Dr. Garrison Nelson of the University of Vermont, developed a list of standing committee chairmen in the First through Ninety-sixth Congresses and select, special, and joint committee chairmen in the Eightieth through Ninety-sixth Congresses. The Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress provided updates for the Ninety-seventh and Ninety-eighth Congresses and the House Office for the Bicentennial and the Senate Historical Office added chairmen in the Ninety-ninth and One Hundredth Congresses. Chairmen are listed by the Congresses in which they served even if they were chairman for only part of a Congress. In the case of death, resignation, or change in committee assignment, two or more individuals may be listed as chairman of a committee in the same Congress.

Information on House leadership positions is drawn largely from a Congressional Research Service report prepared by Paul Rundquist in July 1985. Speakers of the House of Representatives are included for the First through One Hundredth Congresses and House floor leaders and whips listed for the Fifty-sixth through One Hundredth Congresses. Presidents pro tempore of the Senate are included for the First through One Hundredth Congresses. Senate majority and minority leaders and Republican and Democratic whips are included as those respective positions evolved in the early 20th century. Information on Senate leadership positions is drawn largely from "Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate" (Senate Document 100-29) by parliamentarian emeritus, Floyd M. Riddick.

The basis for bibliographical citations for Representatives is a bibliography on Members of Congress since 1774, prepared by Robert U. Goehlert of Indiana University and John R. Sayre of Phillips University. The Office for the Bicentennial provided additional citations for Representatives and updated the bibliography of Goehlert and Sayre who concluded their search in 1983. The Senate Historical Office searched Dissertations in History (vols. 1 and 2), the Library of Congress' computerized card catalog, and the major historical journals' compilations of articles in their disciplines, for additional bibliographical material.

Paul H. Smith, editor of the Letters of the Delegates to Congress, 1774-1789 at the Library of Congress, provided important corrections in the dates of service for Delegates to the Continental Congress. Biographical entries have been revised to include years of attendance at the Continental Congress. The information from Dr. Smith also allowed revision of the table of Delegates to the Continental Congress. Further information on specific dates of election and dates of attendance within a given year is printed in the volumes of the Letters of Delegates to Congress, 1774-1789, 14 vols. to date, (Washington, 1976- ).

The Senate Historical Office and the Office for the Bicentennial received invaluable assistance in the preparation of this volume from many historians, political scientists, archivists, librarians, genealogists, and general readers of the Biographical Directory who alerted the editors to problems with standing entries. State and local historical societies, state archives, documentary editing projects, and newspaper offices among others were most helpful in responding to questions regarding individual entries.

Each of the more than 700 living former Representatives and the more than 100 former Senators as well as each sitting Member of Congress has reviewed his or her entry before its inclusion in the bicentennial edition of the Biographical Directory. Entries for former and current Members incorporate the individual suggested revisions within the standardized format. The United States Association of Former Members of Congress provided important help in locating former Members throughout the country.

Updated entries in the Biographical Directory of the United States Congress are complete through June 30, 1988. During the several years spent preparing this bicentennial edition, the editors have become increasingly aware of the degree to which this volume is and will always be a work in progress. The present revision by the historical offices of the Senate and the House of Representatives has provided an opportunity to make the Biographical Directory a more reliable and consistent historical record. The job of verifying existing data in the more than 11,000 entries, of investigating relevant bibliography, and of including a more complete record of congressional service, however, is one that will continue long after the publication of the present volume. The respective offices welcome any information regarding existing entries.

OFFICERS OF THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH OF THE GOVERNMENT

EXPLANATORY NOTE

A Cabinet officer is not appointed for a fixed term and does not necessarily go out of office with the President who made the appointment. While it is customary to tender one's resignation at the time a change of administration takes place, each officer remains formally at the head of his department until a successor is appointed. Subordinates acting temporarily as heads of departments are not considered Cabinet officers, and in the earlier period of the Nation's history not all Cabinet officers were heads of executive departments. The names of all those exercising the duties and bearing the responsibilities of the executive departments, together with the period of service, are incorporated in the lists that follow.

The dates immediately following the names of executive officers are those upon which commissions were issued, unless otherwise specifically noted. Where periods of time are indicated by dates as, for instance, March 4, 1793–March 3, 1797, both such dates are included as portions of the time period.

The Twentieth Amendment to the Constitution (effective Oct. 15, 1933) changed the terms of the President and Vice President to end at noon on the 20th day of January and the terms of Senators and Representatives to end at noon on the 3d day of January when the terms of their successors shall begin.

[1] Apportionment mandated by the Federal Constitution, which remained in effect for the 1st and 2d Congresses.

[2] No apportionment was made in 1920.

[3] The following representation was added after the several census apportionments indicated when new States were admitted and is included in the above table:

First. Tennessee, 1.
Second. Ohio, 1.
Third. Alabama, 1; Illinois, 1; Indiana, 1; Louisiana, 1; Mississippi, 1.
Fifth. Arkansas, 1; Michigan, 1.
Sixth. California, 2; Florida, 1; Iowa, 2; Texas, 2; Wisconsin, 2.
Seventh. Minnesota, 2; Oregon, 1.
Eighth. Nebraska, 1; Nevada, 1.
Ninth. Colorado, 1.
Tenth. Idaho, 1; Montana, 1; North Dakota, 1; South Dakota, 2; Washington, 1; Wyoming, 1.
Eleventh. Utah, 1.
Twelfth. Oklahoma, 5.
Thirteenth. Arizona, 1; New Mexico, 1.
Seventeenth. Alaska, 1; Hawaii, 1.

[4] Twenty Representatives were assigned to Massachusetts, but 7 of them were credited to Maine when that area became a State.

[5] Apportionment temporarily increased by Public Laws 85-508 and 86-3 due to admission of Alaska and Hawaii as States.

THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES
1789–1989

TIME AND PLACE OF MEETING

The Constitution (Art. I, sec. 4) provided that "The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year * * * on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by law appoint a different day." Pursuant to a resolution of the Continental Congress the first session of the First Congress convened March 4, 1789. Up to and including May 20, 1820, eighteen acts were passed providing for the meeting of Congress on other days in the year. Since that year Congress met regularly on the first Monday in December until January 1934. The date for convening of Congress was changed by the Twentieth Amendment to the Constitution in 1933 to the 3d day of January unless a different day shall be appointed by law. The first and second sessions of the First Congress were held in New York City; subsequently, including the first session of the Sixth Congress, Philadelphia was the meeting place; since then Congress has convened in Washington, D.C.

[1] Neither a quorum of the Senate nor of the House of Representatives appeared in their respective chambers on Wednesday, March 4, 1789. But eight Senators appeared and the minority adjourned from day to day until Monday, April 6, when a quorum of the Senate was first present. Thirteen Members of the House of Representatives appeared on March 4 and a quorum was not present until April 1, when the body proceeded to the transaction of business. When both Houses were organized, on April 6, they met in joint convention, in the hall of the Senate, and proceeded to open and count the electoral vote for President and Vice-President. John Adams, the Vice President elect, appeared in the Senate Chamber and assumed the duties of the chair on Tuesday, April 21, 1789. On May 15, 1789, the Senate determined by lot the classes into which the membership should be divided agreeably to paragraph 2, section 3, of Article I of the Constitution, as follows:

Class 1, term expires March 3, 1791—Messrs. Carroll, Dalton, Ellsworth, Elmer, Maclay, Read, and Grayson.

Class 2, term expires March 3, 1793—Messrs. Bassett, Butler, Few, Lee, Strong, Paterson, and Wingate.

Class 3, term expires March 3, 1795—Messrs. Gunn, Henry, Johnson, Izard, Langdon, and Morris.

[2] Elected April 6, 1789.

[3] Elected April 8, 1789.

[4] Elected April 7, 1789.

[5] Elected April 1, 1789.

[6] Elected April 1, 1789.

[7] Elected May 12, 1789.

[8] Resigned August 14, 1790.

[9] Resigned November 13, 1790, having been elected governor.

[10] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of William Paterson, and took his seat December 6, 1790.

[25] Resigned June 9, 1796.

[26] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of George Cabot, and took his seat December 6, 1796.

[27] Resigned in June 1796, having been elected Senator.

[28] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Benjamin Goodhue, and took his seat December 7, 1796.

[29] Resigned in June 1796, having been elected Senator.

[30] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Theodore Sedgwick, and took his seat January 27, 1797.

[31] Election contested by petition from sundry citizens of Massachusetts; Committee on Elections reported favorably for him, and added "that the attempt to deprive him of his seat was rather the act of malevolence than a desire to promote the public good." On January 25, 1797, these words were stricken out and expressions of compliment to the sitting Member were substituted, and the report was agreed to.

[32] Resigned November 12, 1796.

[33] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Frederick Frelinghuysen, and took his seat December 6, 1796.

[34] Resigned May 23, 1796, having been appointed minister to England.

[35] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Rufus King, and took his seat December 8, 1796.

[36] Resigned June 1, 1796.

[37] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Absalom Tatom, and took his seat December 13, 1796.

[38] Election of David Bard investigated on account of informality in time of making return; committee reported that Mr. Bard was entitled to the seat and the House agreed to the report.

[39] Resigned July 1, 1796.

[40] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Daniel Hiester, and took his seat December 8, 1796.

[41] Presented a memorial on December 10, 1795, claiming election, the governor having declined to issue a certificate to either candidate; the committee of election reported that James Morris had been duly elected, but having died subsequent to the election the seat had become vacant; this report was recommitted and subsequently a resolution was reported that John Richards was entitled to the seat, which was adopted by the House on January 18, 1796, and Mr. Richards took his seat the same day.

[42] Resigned in 1796, before the commencement of the Fifth Congress, to which he had been reelected.

[43] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Benjamin Bourn, and took his seat December 19, 1796.

[44] Resigned October 25, 1796.

[45] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Pierce Butler, and took his seat January 27, 1797.

[46] Admitted as a State into the Union June 1, 1796, formerly known as "Territory South of the River Ohio."

[47] Took his seat December 5, 1796; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1799.

[49] Took his seat December 5, 1796.

[50] Resigned October 15, 1796.

[51] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Moses Robinson, and took his seat December 6, 1796.

[52] Election unsuccessfully contested by Matthew Lyon.

[25] Resigned January 3, 1798.

[26] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Philip Schuyler, and took his seat February 2, 1798; resigned April 16, 1798, having been appointed judge of the United States district court of New York.

[27] Appointed to fill vacancy caused by resignation of John Sloss Hobart, and took his seat May 21, 1798.

[28] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of John Sloss Hobart, and took his seat December 11, 1798.

[29] Died June 4, 1798.

[30] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Nathan Bryan, and took his seat December 10, 1798.

[31] Resigned in 1798, having been appointed commissioner to Great Britain.

[32] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Samuel Sitgreaves, and took his seat December 4, 1798.

[33] Resigned in October 1797.

[34] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of George Ege, and took his seat December 1, 1797.

[35] Died August 1, 1798.

[36] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of John Swanwick, and took his seat December 3, 1798.

[37] Resigned in October 1797.

[38] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of William Bradford, and took his seat November 22, 1797.

[39] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Representative-elect Benjamin Bourn, in the preceding Congress; resigned in 1797.

[40] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Elisha R. Potter, and took his seat November 13, 1797.

[41] Resigned November 26, 1798.

[42] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of John Hunter, and took his seat February 16, 1799.

[43] Resigned July 10, 1797, having been appointed minister plenipotentiary to Portugal.

[44] Many biographical errors have resulted from the fact that Smith of Charleston district and Smith of Spartan district both formerly were known as "William Smith." It was about this time that Smith of Charleston district changed his name to "William Loughton Smith."

[45] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of William L. Smith, and took his seat November 23, 1797.

[46] Expelled for "high misdemeanor" July 8, 1797.

[47] Elected to fill vacancy caused by expulsion of William Blount, and took his seat November 22, 1797, for the term ending March 3, 1799. (See footnote 50.)

[48] Appointed to fill vacancy in the term beginning March 4, 1797 (the legislature having failed to elect his successor), and took his seat May 15, 1797.

[49] Elected to fill vacancy in the term beginning March 4, 1797, and took his seat November 22, 1797; resigned in April 1798.

[50] Appointed to fill vacancy in the term beginning March 4, 1797, caused by the resignation of Andrew Jackson, and took his seat December 6, 1798; vacancy in this class from April 1798, to October 5, 1798. Joseph Anderson was elected December 12, 1798, to fill vacancy in the term beginning March 4, 1797, caused by resignation of Andrew Jackson, but did not present his credentials under this election until the Sixth Congress, continuing to serve in the other class, and on December 31, 1798, obtained leave of absence for Daniel Smith for the remainder of the session; technically, the term of Smith expired on the election of Anderson.

[51] Took his seat November 23, 1797.

[18] Admitted as a State into the Union March 15, 1820. Previous to March 3, 1820, Maine was a part of Massachusetts, and was called the "District of Maine" and its Representatives were numbered with those of Massachusetts; by compact between the two States, Maine became a separate and independent State, and by act of Congress of March 3, 1820, was admitted into the Union as such—the admission to date from the 15th of the same month.

[19] Took his seat November 13, 1820; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1823.

[20] Took his seat November 13, 1820; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1821.

[21] The act of Congress approved April 7, 1820, provided "That in the election of Representatives in the Seventeenth Congress, the State of Massachusetts shall be entitled to choose 13 Representatives only; and the State of Maine shall be entitled to choose 7 Representatives, * * *. That if the seat of any of the Representatives in the present Congress [Sixteenth], who were elected in and under the authority of the State of Massachusetts, and who are now inhabitants of the State of Maine, shall be vacated by death, resignation, or otherwise, such vacancy shall be supplied by a successor, who shall, at the time of his election, be an inhabitant of the State of Maine."

[22] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of John Holmes, a Representative from Massachusetts, but residing in the new State of Maine, and took his seat December 11, 1820. (See footnote 21.)

[23] Died April 23, 1819.

[24] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Alexander C. Hanson, and took his seat January 4, 1820.

[25] Elected for the term beginning March 4, 1819, and took his seat December 27, 1819; vacancy in this class from March 4, 1819, to December 20, 1819.

[26] Resigned May 15, 1820.

[27] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Prentiss Mellen, and took his seat December 1, 1820.

[28] The act of Congress approved April 7, 1820, provided "That in the election of Representatives in the Seventeenth Congress, the State of Massachusetts shall be entitled to choose 13 Representatives only; and the State of Maine shall be entitled to choose 7 Representatives, * * *. That if the seat of any of the Representatives in the present Congress [Sixteenth], who were elected in and under the authority of the State of Massachusetts, and who are now inhabitants of the State of Maine, shall be vacated by death, resignation, or otherwise, such vacancy shall be supplied by a successor, who shall, at the time of his election, be an inhabitant of the State of Maine."

[30] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Edward Dowse, and took his seat November 13, 1820.

[31] Resigned March 15, 1820; subsequently elected Senator from Maine. (See footnote 28.)

[32] Resigned May 15, 1820.

[33] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Jonathan Mason, and took his seat November 27, 1820.

Vacant

[41] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Representative-elect John C. Wright (March 3, 1821, before the beginning of the congressional term), and took his seat December 3, 1821.

[42] In previous issues of this publication this name appears as "John Vance." It is believed that this is an error arising through a printer's blunder in the first issue of the Congressional Directory for the Seventeenth Congress, caused by the typesetter carrying the name of "John" of Sloane's down to that of "Vance." The House Journal does not show that a "John Vance" was ever a Representative from Ohio, but in the same directory, under "Alphabetical List of Boarding Houses with the Members in each," the list of boarders at Miss Polk's home included "Joseph" Vance, but no "John."

[43] Elected for term beginning March 4, 1821, and took his seat December 17, 1821; vacancy in this class from March 4, 1821, to December 9, 1821.

[44] Resigned May 8, 1822.

[45] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Henry Baldwin, and took his seat December 2, 1822.

[46] Resigned before Congress assembled.

[47] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of James Duncan, and took his seat December 12, 1821.

[48] Resigned before Congress assembled.

[49] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of William Cox Ellis, and took his seat December 12, 1821.

[50] Resigned May 8, 1822.

[51] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of William Milnor, and took his seat December 2, 1822.

[52] Resigned May 20, 1822.

[53] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Samuel Moore, and took his seat December 2, 1822.

[54] Died October 17, 1822.

[55] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Ludwig Worman, and took his seat December 23, 1822.

[56] Resigned May 8, 1822.

[57] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of James Blair, and took his seat December 11, 1822.

[58] Died May 24, 1822.

[59] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of James Overstreet, and took his seat December 4, 1822.

[60] Resigned May 8, 1822.

[61] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of William Lowndes, and took his seat January 6, 1823.

[62] Reelected for the term commencing March 4, 1821, and took his seat December 3, 1821; vacancy in this class from March 4, 1821, to September 26, 1821, caused by recess of legislature.

[63] Committee on Elections reported on February 17, 1823, that he had been duly elected, but appears never to have taken his seat.

[64] Resigned December 15, 1822.

[65] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of James Pleasants, and took his seat December 30, 1822.

[66] Resigned January 14, 1823.

[67] Died August 19, 1822.

[68] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Thomas Van Sweringen, and took his seat December 2, 1822.

[69] Election unsuccessfully contested by Matthew Lyon.

[70] Formed March 30, 1822, from lands ceded by Spain to the United States by treaty of Washington of February 22, 1819, and theretofore known as "East and West Florida," and granted a Delegate in Congress.

[71] Took his seat January 3, 1823.

[72] Granted statehood August 10, 1821.

[17] Resigned August 26, 1828.

[18] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Albion K. Parris, and took his seat January 26, 1829.

[19] Died July 2, 1827, before Congress assembled.

[20] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of William Burleigh, and took his seat December 3, 1827.

[21] Reelected to the Twenty-first Congress, but resigned, having been elected Senator.

[22] Elected to fill vacancy in the term beginning March 4, 1827, caused by failure of legislature to elect, and took his seat December 17, 1827.

[23] Resigned May 30, 1827, before Congress assembled, having been elected Senator.

[24] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Daniel Webster, and took his seat December 3, 1827.

[25] Resigned September 12, 1828.

[26] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of William Haile, and took his seat December 8, 1828.

[27] A remonstrance against the legality of his election was considered by a select committee of five Senators; it revealed that, as chairman of the joint convention of the general assembly of New Jersey, Mr. Bateman had voted for himself for Senator, had broken a tie vote thereby, and upon such state of facts the certificate had been issued to him; May 22, 1828, the committee reported, that, in its opinion, he had only exercised a legal right by thus voting, and, upon its request, was discharged; resigned January 12, 1829.

[28] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Ephraim Bateman, and took his seat February 9, 1829; Resigned January 30, 1829 (see footnote 27); vacancy in this class from January 30, 1829, to March 3, 1829.

[29] Died January 14, 1828.

[30] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of George Holcombe, and took his seat December 1, 1828.

[31] Died July 23, 1828.

[32] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Hedge Thompson, and took his seat December 1, 1828.

[33] Resigned December 20, 1828.

[34] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Martin Van Buren, and took his seat January 29, 1829.

[35] Resigned May 2, 1827, before Congress assembled.

[36] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of David E. Evans, and took his seat December 3, 1827.

[37] Resigned May 9, 1828.

[38] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Thomas J. Oakley, and took his seat December 1, 1828.

[39] Resigned February 16, 1829.

[30] Mississippi elected its Representatives in November of odd numbered years (after the beginning of the congressional term); as Congress had been called to meet in September, the governor issued writs for a special election to fill vacancies until the regular election; John F. H. Claiborne and Samuel J. Gholson presented credentials and were seated September 4, 1837, when, at their request the question of the validity of their election was referred to the Committee on Elections; on October 3, 1837, the House decided they had been elected for the full term; Sergeant S. Prentiss and Thomas J. Word presented credentials on December 27, 1837, and on February 5, 1838, the House rescinded its former decision and declared the seats vacant; Prentiss and Word were subsequently elected, and took their seats May 30, 1838.

[8] A protest of certain members of the legislature was presented, in the preceding Congress, against the legality of the election of both Mr. Fitch and Mr. Bright, setting out "they were not elected by the legislature, but by a convocation of a portion of the members thereof, not authorized by State law, legislative resolution, or constitutional provision"; both the Senators were seated upon their credentials, and the credentials and protest were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary; the committee reported May 24, 1858, that the sitting Senators were entitled to their seats, and this report was agreed to June 12, 1858. On January 24, 1859, a memorial of the State of Indiana was presented representing that it was the wish of the State that Henry S. Lane and William M. McCarty be admitted to seats as the only legally chosen Senators; February 3, 1859, the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the memorial, reported there was no vacancy in the Senate from the State of Indiana, and that the election of Messrs. Lane and McCarty was void; the Senate agreed to this report February 14, 1859.

[9] Died September 7, 1857, before Congress assembled.

[10] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of James Lockhart, and took his seat December 7, 1857.

[11] Died March 29, 1857.

[12] Elected to fill vacancy caused by the death of Samuel Brenton, and took his seat December 7, 1857.

[13] Election unsuccessfully contested by William Pinkney Whyte.

[14] Election unsuccessfully contested by Henry P. Brooks.

[15] Owing to ill health was present in this Congress but one day (December 7, 1857).

[16] Resigned December 24, 1857, having been elected Governor.

[17] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Nathaniel P. Banks, and took his seat January 21, 1858.

[18] Admitted as a State into the Union May 11, 1858.

[19] Took his seat May 12, 1858; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1863.

[20] Took his seat May 12, 1858; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1859.

[21] Credentials of James M. Cavanaugh and William W. Phelps were presented on May 13, 1858, and referred to the Committee on Elections "to inquire into and report upon the right of these gentlemen to be admitted and sworn as Members of this House," and on May 22, 1858, the committee resolution "that they be admitted and sworn" was adopted; took their seats the same day.

[22] Died July 17, 1858.

[23] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of John A. Quitman, and took his seat December 7, 1858.

[24] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Representative-elect James S. Green (before the beginning of the congressional term), who had later been elected Senator, and took his seat December 7, 1857.

[25] Died May 26, 1857.

[26] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of James Bell, and took his seat December 7, 1857.

[23] Readmitted to representation June 25, 1868.

[24] Took his seat June 30, 1868; term to expire March 3, 1873; on the same day William Marvin presented credentials dated November 28, 1868, which were read and no further action taken thereon because Mr. Osborn was seated.

[25] Took his seat July 2, 1868; term to expire March 3, 1869.

[26] Took his seat July 1, 1868.

[27] Although Georgia was not formally readmitted to representation until July 15, 1870 (in the succeeding Congress), the Representatives elected to this Congress qualified as indicated.

[28] On December 7, 1868, the credentials of Joshua Hill, elected by the legislature to fill vacancy in the term beginning March 4, 1867, were presented and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary; on January 11, 1869, the credentials of Homer V. M. Miller, elected in the same manner, for the term beginning March 4, 1865, were presented and were similarly referred; on January 25, 1869, the committee reported that the State of Georgia had not complied with the conditions of an act providing for her admission to representation, and that Mr. Hill "ought not now to be admitted"; February 17, 1869, the committee reported against admitting Mr. Miller to his seat, and the cases remained undisposed of.

[29] John A. Wimpy and John H. Cristy both claimed election from the sixth district, but neither was seated.

[30] Took his seat July 25, 1868.

[31] Resigned February 7, 1868.

[32] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of James Guthrie, and took his seat February 28, 1868.

[33] On July 3, 1867, it was proposed to seat all the Members-elect from Kentucky, but protests against the manner of holding the election and charges of disloyal acts by certain individual members of the delegation were presented and a resolution was adopted directing an investigation and referring to the Committee on Elections the credentials of Messrs. Lawrence S. Trimble, John Y. Brown, J. Proctor Knott, Asa P. Grover, Thomas L. Jones, James B. Beck, and John D. Young, who were not permitted to qualify pending this investigation; Samuel E. Smith contested the election of John Y. Brown, but the House, on February 15, 1868, decided that neither was entitled to the seat, which remained vacant throughout the Congress.

[34] Election unsuccessfully contested by G. G. Symes; took his seat January 10, 1868.

[35] Died May 8, 1867, never having qualified; the election of Mr. Hise was subsequently unsuccessfully contested by George D. Blakey.

[36] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Elijah Hise, and took his seat December 5, 1867; George D. Blakey, claiming to have been elected from this district instead of Mr. Hise, filed a protest against the seating of Mr. Golladay, but this protest was not allowed.

[37] Charges of disloyalty were unsustained, and took his seat December 3, 1867.

[38] Charges of disloyalty were unsustained, and took his seat December 4, 1867.

[39] Took his seat July 8, 1867.

[40] Successfully contested the election of John D. Young, and took his seat June 22, 1868.

[41] Readmitted to representation July 9, 1868.

[42] Took his seat July 17, 1868; term to expire March 3, 1871.

[43] Took his seat July 17, 1868; term to expire March 3, 1873.

[44] Took his seat July 18, 1868.

[45] Took his seat July 18, 1868; died August 26, 1868; Caleb S. Hunt and J. Willis Menard claimed to have been elected to fill the vacancy, and Simon Jones claimed he was elected, instead of Mann, in the first instance. The House decided against all claimants, and the seat remained vacant for the remainder of the session.

[46] Resigned July 10, 1868.

[47] Appointed to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Reverdy Johnson, and took his seat July 14, 1868.

[48] Elected for term beginning March 4, 1867, and took his seat March 9, 1868. The credentials of Philip F. Thomas, Senator-elect, were presented March 18, 1867, but he was not permitted to qualify; on February 19, 1868, the Senate adopted a resolution that he was not entitled to qualify as he had "voluntarily given aid, countenance, and encouragement to persons engaged in armed hostility to the United States."

[72] Died August 11, 1868.

[73] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Thaddeus Stevens, and took his seat December 7, 1868.

[74] Died June 27, 1867.

[75] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Charles Denison, and took his seat November 21, 1867.

[76] Died August 25, 1868.

[77] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Darwin A. Finney, and took his seat December 7, 1868.

[78] Readmitted to representation July 9, 1868.

[79] Took his seat July 20, 1868; term to expire March 3, 1871.

[80] Took his seat July 22, 1868; term to expire March 3, 1873.

[81] Took his seat July 18, 1868.

[82] Took his seat July 20, 1868.

[83] Took his seat July 25, 1868.

[84] The credentials of Thomas A. Hamilton, claiming to be a Member-elect from the State at large, were presented; claimant held that, inasmuch as Tennessee had voluntarily emancipated and enfranchised here slaves, she had added to her representative population a sufficient number to give her nine, instead of eight, Representatives, and he had been elected as such ninth Member. It was the first of many similar claims made by other readmitted States; the majority report was adverse to the claimant and, although the House took no formal action, he was not seated.

[85] Qualified under act of June 19, 1868, and took his seat June 26, 1868.

[86] Took his seat November 21, 1867.

[87] Took his seat November 25, 1867.

[88] George M. Chilcott and A. C. Hunt each presented credentials on March 5, 1867, which were referred to the Committee on Elections; the committee reported that neither was entitled to the seat; Chilcott was seated March 20, 1867, and Hunt subsequently abendoned the contest.

[89] Credentials certifying his election on September 2, 1867, were presented November 21, 1867, and referred to the Committee on Elections, together with letter of secretary of New Mexico claiming fraud in election; was seated on December 19, 1867, and served until February 20, 1869; succeeded by J. Francisco Chaves, who contested his election.

[90] Successfully contested the election of Charles P. Clever, and took his seat February 20, 1869.

[91] Election unsuccessfully contested by William McGrorty.

---

[1] Elected March 23, 1869; April 9, 1869; May 28, 1870; July 1, 1870; July 14, 1870.

[2] Elected March 22, 1869.

[3] Elected March 4, 1869.

[4] Reelected March 5, 1869.

[5] Elected August 3, 1869.

[6] Elected April 5, 1869.

[7] Formally readmitted to representation by act of July 15, 1870.

[8] The credentials of Mr. Hill and Mr. Miller, presented in the Fortieth Congress and undisposed of on the files of the Senate, were referred again to the Committee on the Judiciary March 9, 1869; they were reported back without recommendation and ordered to lie on the table March 17, 1869; they were again referred to the committee February 14, 1870. A new election was held in Georgia, and on July 15, 1870, the credentials of Richard H. Whiteley and Henry P. Farrow were presented and ordered to lie on the table, but were subsequently referred; on the same day of their presentation the act was approved readmitting Georgia to representation in Congress. The committee reported upon all the credentials January 23, 1871, resolving that Messrs. Hill and Miller were duly elected; that Mr. Hill should be permitted to take his seat, but that Mr. Miller was disqualified by reason of his service in the Confederate Army; this report was adopted February 1, 1871. A joint resolution prescribing a qualification oath for Mr. Miller was approved February 24, 1871; took his seat the same day.

[9] Took his seat under the resolution of February 1, 1871, on that day; term to expire March 3, 1873.

[10] Qualified under the terms of the joint resolution approved February 24, 1871, and took his seat on that date; term to expire March 3, 1871.

[11] Pierce M. B. Young, Nelson Tift, W. P. Edwards, J. W. Clift, Samuel F. Gove, and C. H. Prince presented credentials alleging their election as Representatives, April 20, 1868, the same election in which they were elected to the Fortieth Congress; by resolution of January 28, 1870, the House declared they were not entitled to seats. Pierce M. B. Young subsequently presented credentials under a later election and was seated.

[12] Qualified under act of July 11, 1868, and took his seat January 23, 1871.

[13] Qualified under act of July 11, 1868, and took his seat February 9, 1871; election unsuccessful contested by Nelson Tift.

[14] Qualified under act of July 11, 1868, and took his seat January 16, 1871.

[15] Qualified under act of July 2, 1862, and took his seat January 16, 1871.

[16] Qualified under act of July 11, 1868, and took his seat January 24, 1871; election unsuccessfully contested by Thomas P. Beard.

[17] Resigned March 6, 1869.

[18] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Elihu B. Washburne, and took his seat December 6, 1869.

[19] Reelected to the Forty-second Congress but resigned, having been elected Senator.

[20] Election unsuccessfully contested by John S. Reid.

[21] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Representative-elect Daniel D. Pratt (January 27, 1869), before the beginning of the congressional term, who had been elected Senator, and took his seat March 4, 1869.

[22] Resigned December 6, 1869.

[23] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of James W. Grimes, and took his seat January 26, 1870.

[24] Died September 30, 1870.

[25] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of William Smyth, and took his seat December 6, 1870.

[26] Resigned February 28, 1870; the Governor of Kentucky peremptorily refused to accept the resignation and requested its withdrawl; the request was complied with; on March 7, 1870, a resolution was presented in the House as a question of privilege, citing these facts and granting him the right to resume his seat; the House refused to entertain it.

[27] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Jacob S. Golladay, and took his seat May 10, 1870.

[28] Election unsuccessfully contested by Sidney M. Barnes.

[29] Seated by resolution of March 5, 1869; election unsuccessfully contested by John T. Zeigler.

[30] The Governor of Louisiana having officially declared that the election held in the State of Louisiana on November 3, 1868, "Did not elicit an honest will of the people, * * *," a resolution was adopted on March 9, 1869, directing the Committee on Elections to inquire into the validity of the elections of those presenting credentials; all seats were contested, and the Members-elect were not sworn pending the contests.

[31] Contested the election of Louis St. Martin; committee reported in favor of seating Mr. Sypher, and House adopted the report by a vote of 78 to 73, moved to reconsider by a vote of 86 to 79, then adopted a substitute resolution declaring the seat vacant by a vote of 96 to 68 (April 20, 1870); subsequently elected, and took his seat December 5, 1870.

[32] Election unsuccessfully contested by Caleb S. Hunt; took his seat April 8, 1869.

[33] Election unsuccessfully contested by Adolphe Bailey; took his seat July 6, 1870.

[34] Successfully contested the election of Michael Ryan (who had not been permitted to qualify), and took his seat May 23, 1870.

[35] Frank Morey, G. W. McCranie, and P. J. Kennedy each presented credentials claiming to be the Member-elect from the fifth congressional district; by resolution of April 28, 1870, it was declared there was no lawful election in the district. Morey presented credentials under a subsequent election, and took his seat December 6, 1870.

[36] Died September 9, 1869.

[37] Appointed to fill vacancy caused by death of William Pitt Fessenden, and took his seat December 6, 1869; subsequently elected.

[38] Resigned March 12, 1869, having been appointed Secretary of the Treasury.

[39] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of George S. Boutwell, and took his seat December 6, 1869.

[67] Died February 5, 1870.

[68] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Truman H. Hoag, and took his seat April 23, 1870.

[69] Served until April 9, 1869; succeeded by Leonard Myers, who contested his election.

[70] Successfully contested the election of John Moffet, and took his seat April 9, 1869.

[71] Served until April 13, 1870; succeeded by Caleb N. Taylor, who contested his election.

[72] Successfully contested the election of John R. Reading, and took his seat April 13, 1870.

[73] Both John Covode and Henry D. Foster claimed to have been elected, while the governor refused to sign a certificate or declare either elected; the House at first refused admission to either; case was recommitted for investigation and on February 9, 1870, the House declared Mr. Covode entitled to the seat; took his seat the same day; died January 11, 1871.

[74] February 21, 1870, the Committee on Military Affairs presented a report showing he had been "influenced by improper pecuniary considerations in making appointments to the Military and Naval Academies," and a resolution for his expulsion; pending action he resigned February 24, 1870; following the announcement, the House adopted a resolution, without a dissenting vote, declaring he had made such appointments in violation of law, that they were influenced by pecuniary considerations, that he was unworthy of a seat in the body, and condemning his conduct. June 18, 1870, credentials of his reelection were presented; on June 21, 1870, the House passed a resolution citing its previous action, declining to allow him to be sworn, and directing the return of his credentials.

[75] Elected to fill vacancy caused by B. Frank Whittemore being refused his seat; took his seat December 12, 1870.

[76] Successfully contested the election of J. P. Reed, and took his seat April 8, 1869; the House had refused to permit Mr. Reed to qualify upon the ground of disloyalty.

[77] Successfully contested the election of William D. Simpson, who was not permitted to qualify on his credentials, and took his seat May 27, 1870.

[78] John B. Rogers claimed a seat as Representative at large, but claim was not seriously considered.

[79] Election unsuccessfully contested by C. A. Sheafe.

[80] Readmitted to representation by act of March 30, 1870.

[81] Took his seat March 31, 1870; term to expire March 3, 1871.

[82] Took his seat March 31, 1870; term to expire March 3, 1875.

[83] Qualified under act of July 2, 1862, and took his seat March 31, 1870.

[84] Qualified under act of July 2, 1862, and took his seat March 31, 1870; election unsuccessfully contested by Benjamin F. Grafton.

[85] Readmitted to representation by act of January 26, 1870.

[86] Took his seat January 28, 1870; term to expire March 3, 1871.

[87] Took his seat January 27, 1870; term to expire March 3, 1875.

[88] The Virginia constitutional convention called under reconstruction laws passed an ordinance providing for a ninth Representative at large; credentials of Joseph Segar as such Representative were presented January 25, 1870; on July 11, 1870, the House adopted a resolution, without division, declaring him not entitled to a seat.

[89] Qualified under act of July 2, 1862, and took his seat January 31, 1870.

[90] Qualified under act of July 2, 1862, and took his seat January 27, 1870.

[91] Qualified under act of July 2, 1862, and took his seat February 1, 1870; election unsuccessfully contested by George Tucker.

[92] Qualified under act of July 2, 1862, and took his seat January 27, 1870; died October 16, 1870.

[93] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Robert Ridgway, qualified under act of July 11, 1868, and took his seat December 5, 1870.

[94] Qualified under act of July 2, 1862, and took his seat January 31, 1870; election unsuccessfully contested by Charles Whittlesey.

[95] Qualified under act of July 11, 1868, and took his seat January 28, 1870.

[15] Election unsuccessfully contested by Virgil Hilyer.

[16] Election unsuccessfully contested by Nelson Tift.

[17] Died August 18, 1872.

[18] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Thomas J. Speer, and took his seat December 2, 1872.

[19] Election unsuccessfully contested by Isham S. Fannin.

[20] Resigned August 26, 1871.

[21] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Burton C. Cook, and took his seat December 4, 1871.

[22] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Representative-elect John A. Logan, in preceding Congress, and took his seat December 4, 1871; resigned January 4, 1873.

[23] Election unsuccessfully contested by David S. Gooding.

[24] May 11, 1872, the Committee on Privileges and Elections was authorized to investigate charges of bribery and corruption in connection with the election of both the sitting Senators; June 3, 1872, it reported that in the case of Mr. Pomeroy such charges were totally unsustained; in the case of Mr. Caldwell the report was directly to the contrary, and on February 17, 1873, it reported a resolution declaring him "not duly and legally elected"; this report was not acted upon during the Congress, but early in the succeeding Congress, during the special session of the Senate, while the report was pending and under discussion, Mr. Caldwell resigned (March 24, 1873).

[25] Died September 22, 1872.

[26] Appointed to fill vacancy caused by death of Garrett Davis, and took his seat December 2, 1872.

[27] Resigned November 1, 1872; on January 22, 1873, credentials of John Ray and William L. McMillen, each claiming to have been elected to fill the vacancy, were presented and referred; February 20, 1873, the committee reported that neither of the claimants was entitled to a seat, as no State government existed at the time in Louisiana, and recommended the passage of a bill ordering a new election; such a bill was rejected February 27, 1873; no further action was taken on the credentials and the seat remained vacant to the close of the Congress.

[28] Died November 5, 1871, never having qualified.

[29] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of James McCleery, and took his seat December 3, 1872.

[30] Resigned March 3, 1873, having been elected Vice President.

[31] Resigned May 13, 1872, to become judge of probate court.

[32] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of George M. Brooks, and took his seat December 2, 1872.

[33] Resigned December 5, 1871, having been elected governor.

[34] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of William B. Washburn, and took his seat February 14, 1872.

[35] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Representative-elect Thomas W. Ferry, in preceding Congress, and took his seat December 4, 1871.

[36] Elected January 18, 1870, for the term beginning March 4, 1871, but did not accept or qualify until December 4, 1871, preferring to retain the governorship.

[37] February 5, 1873, a select committee was appointed to consider matters presented in a communication from the House of Representatives and accompanying testimony, reflecting upon the conduct of certain Senators in connection with the "Credit Mobilier of America"; February 27, 1873, the committee reported, exonerating other Senators mentioned in the report, and a resolution favoring the expulsion of Mr. Patterson; as the Congress and Mr. Patterson's term expired simultaneously on March 3, 1873, no final action was reached.

[38] Joseph C. Abbott was a claimant for this seat; the Committee on Privileges and Elections reported February 28, 1872, that Zebulon B. Vance had received "a majority of the whole number of votes cast in each house," and Mr. Abbott received the next highest number of votes; the next day Mr. Vance was declared duly elected. Mr. Abbott rested his claim on what he assumed to be the legal result of the conceded ineligibility of Mr. Vance, who was barred by the provisions of the fourteenth amendment; Mr. Vance made no claim to the seat; on February 5, 1872, credentials of Mr. Ransom were presented, certifying he had been elected January 30, 1872, "to fill a vacancy existing by reason of the resignation of Zebulon B. Vance"; April 23, 1872, Senate declared, by resolution, that Mr. Abbott had not been elected, and the day following that Mr. Ransom was declared entitled to the seat; took his seat April 24, 1872; resolutions were subsequently adopted allowing mileage and salary to Mr. Abbott from March 4, 1871, to April 23, 1872, and fixing Mr. Ransom's term and pay as beginning March 4, 1871.

[39] Took his seat May 23, 1872; election unsuccessfully contested by James H. Harris.

[40] Resigned in 1872.

[41] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Aaron F. Perry, and took his seat December 2, 1872.

[42] Election unsuccessfully contested by R. C. Schenck.

[43] Resigned December 2, 1872.

[44] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Ulysses Mercur, and took his seat January 7, 1873.

[45] Election unsuccessfully contested by John Cessna.

[46] Election contested by Christopher C. Bowen; seat declared vacant January 24, 1873.

[47] Election unsuccessfully contested by Isaac G. McKissick.

[48] Thomas H. Reeves claimed a seat as Representative at large, but claim was not considered.

[49] Presented himself to take the oath of office March 4, 1871; a certified copy of a joint resolution of the Texas Legislature declaring his election by the preceding legislature illegal was offered and he was not permitted to qualify; March 15, 1871, credentials of Joseph J. Reynolds, claiming to be the Senator-elect, were presented; March 18, 1871, the Senate agreed to a reported resolution declaring Mr. Hamilton duly elected; took his seat March 20, 1871.

[50] Elected October 3 to 6, 1871.

[51] Given a seat by resolution of January 10, 1872; served until May 13, 1872; succeeded by De Witt C. Giddings, who contested his election.

[52] Successfully contested the election of William T. Clark, and took his seat May 13, 1872.

[53] Election unsuccessfully contested by Lewis McKenzie.

[55] Established under the seventeenth clause of the eighth section of Article I of the Constitution of the United States; formed from territory ceded to the United States by the State of Maryland, legislative act of December 23, 1788; and by the State of Virginia, legislative act of December 3, 1789; cessions accepted by Congress by act of July 16, 1790, and lines and bounds were established by proclamation of the President, George Washington, March 30, 1791. By act of July 9, 1846, Congress retroceded the county of Alexandria, incorporated in the District, to the State of Virginia; by act of February 21, 1871, a territorial form of government was provided, with the right to Delegate representation in Congress.

[56] Took his seat December 4, 1871.

[57] Elected August 7, 1871.

[58] Elected September 4, 1871.

---

[11] Died January 8, 1879.

[12] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Julian Hartridge, and took his seat February 17, 1879.

[13] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Representative-elect Benjamin H. Hill, in preceding Congress, and took his seat October 15, 1877.

[14] Died November 1, 1877.

[15] Appointed to fill vacancy caused by death of Oliver H. P. T. Morton, and took his seat November 12, 1877; subsequently elected.

[16] This seat was claimed by Henry M. Spofford; March 5, 1877 (in the special session of the Senate), Mr. Kellogg presented himself to be sworn, but objection was made and his credentials were ordered to lie on the table; October 17, 1877, the credentials of Mr. Spofford were presented, and they, with the credentials of Mr. Kellogg, were referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections; November 26, 1877, the committee reported in favor of Mr. Kellogg; the report was adopted November 30, 1877; took his seat the same day. In the succeeding Congress the case was reopened upon petition of Mr. Spofford and a report was made in his favor, but he died August 20, 1880, before action was taken.

[17] In the preceding Congress the Committee on Privileges and Elections twice reported that Pinckney B. S. Pinchback was entitled to the seat upon credentials presented from two elections; the committee, after these decisions, was instructed to pass upon credentials of James B. Eustis and held that, inasmuch as Mr. Pinchback had a clear title, there was no vacancy; the Senate refused to adopt the report of the committee and declared Mr. Pinchback "not entitled to the seat" by a vote of 32 to 29. March 9, 1877 (in the special session of the Senate), the credentials of Mr. Eustis were taken from the files and again referred the committee reported December 1, 1877, holding that the Senate's action in the case of Mr. Pinchback was a final adjudication, and a resolution declaring Mr. Eustis entitled to his seat, his term of service to date from January 12, 1876; this report and resolution were adopted December 10, 1877, and Mr. Eustis appeared, qualified, and took his seat the same day.

[18] Served until February 20, 1878; succeeded by Joseph H. Acklen, who contested his election.

[19] Successfully contested the election of Chester B. Darrall, and took his seat February 20, 1878.

[20] Election unsuccessfully contested by George L. Smith.

[21] Died March 15, 1878.

[22] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of John E. Leonard, and took his seat December 2, 1878.

[23] Election unsuccessfully contested by Charles E. Nash.

[24] Served until March 28, 1878; succeeded by Benjamin Dean, who contested his election.

[25] Successfully contested the election of Walbridge A. Field, and took his seat March 28, 1878.

[40] Election unsuccessfully contested by Samuel W. McDowell.

[41] Resigned effective March 12, 1877.

[42] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Simon Cameron, and took his seat October 15, 1877.

[43] David T. Corbin claimed this seat; his credentials, with those of Mr. Butler, were referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections; November 26, 1877, the committee, upon its request, was discharged from further consideration of Mr. Butler's credentials; November 30, 1877, a resolution that Mr. Butler be sworn in was agreed to by a vote of 29 to 28, the Vice President voting to break a tie; appeared and qualified the same day. On February 4, 1879, the committee reported that Mr. Corbin was entitled to the seat, and a resolution that he be sworn; the Senate refused to consider this report February 25, 1879, and on February 28 following the Vice President laid before the Senate a letter from Mr. Corbin withdrawing his claim, and no further action was taken.

[44] Election unsuccessfully contested by John S. Richardson.

[45] Died January 10, 1879, before the commencement of the Forty-sixth Congress, to which he had been reelected.

[46] Died December 22, 1878.

[47] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Beverly B. Douglas, and took his seat February 8, 1879.

[17] Election unsuccessfully contested by James McCabe.

[18] Died April 29, 1879.

[19] Elected to fill vacancy caused by the death of Rush Clark, and took his seat December 1, 1879.

[20] The credentials of Thomas C. Manning, appointed to fill vacancy caused by the death of Henry M. Spofford (August 20, 1880), contestant for this seat in the preceding Congress, were presented December 7, 1880; inasmuch as the Senate had taken no action upon the report that was favorable to Mr. Spofford, no action was taken upon Mr. Manning's credentials beyond referring them to the committee.

[21] Election unsuccessfully contested by E. Moody Boynton.

[22] Died November 1, 1879.

[23] Appointed to fill vacancy caused by death of Zachariah Chandler, and took his seat December 3, 1879; subsequently elected.

[24] Resigned March 3, 1881, before the commencement of the Forty-eighth Congress to which he had been reelected, having been elected Senator.

[1] Vice President Thomas A. Hendricks died in preceding Congress.

[2] Reelected December 5, 1887.

[3] Reelected December 5, 1887.

[4] Election unsuccessfully contested by John V. McDuffie.

[5] Election unsuccessfully contested by Joseph D. Lynch.

[6] Elected May 19, 1887, and took his seat December 5, 1887; Jesse J. Finley was appointed by the Governor on February 28, 1887, to fill the vacancy existing after March 4, 1887, until the next meeting of the legislature, but never qualified. Upon the request of the financial clerk of the Senate for an opinion as to his authority to pay Mr. Finley the salary due him as a Senator-designate, President pro tempore Ingalls held that it should not be done, as the appointment "was in anticipation of a vacancy, and not to fill a vacancy that existed, as contemplated by article 3 of the Constitution"; subsequently the Senate adopted a resolution to pay Mr. Finley for services rendered from March 4 to May 19, 1887.

[24] Election unsuccessfully contested by Robert Smalls.

[25] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Representative-elect John H. Reagan, in preceding Congress, and took his seat December 5, 1887.

[26] The Legislature of West Virginia had met and adjourned without electing a Senator for the term beginning March 4, 1887; on March 5, 1887, the governor appointed Daniel B. Lucas to fill such vacancy; on the same day he issued a proclamation calling the legislature in extraordinary session for eight specific purposes, the election of Senator not being named as one of them; the legislature proceeded to choose a Senator, and Charles J. Faulkner was elected; credentials of both Mr. Lucas and Mr. Faulkner were presented on December 5, 1887, and Mr. Faulkner appeared to be sworn, but objection was made and he was not permitted to qualify; December 14, 1887, the Senate adopted a report from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, to whom all papers were referred on the 12th, declaring Mr. Faulkner duly elected and entitled to the seat; appeared, qualified, and took his seat the same day.

[27] Elected on January 18, 1887, to fill vacancy caused by death of Representative-elect William T. Price, in preceding Congress, but on account of illness did not take his seat until January 4, 1888.

[16] Admitted as a State into the Union July 3, 1890.

[17] In addition to the Senators named the credentials of Fred T. Dubois, who had been elected "for the term of six years from March 4, 1891," were presented December 30, 1890, but the Senate refused to consider them prior to the beginning of the Fifty-second Congress, when they were to become effective.

[18] Took his seat December 29, 1890; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1895.

[62] Elected to fill vacancy in the term beginning March 1, 1899, caused by failure of legislature to elect, and took his seat February 4, 1901; vacancy in this class from March 4, 1899, to January 22, 1901.

[63] Brigham H. Roberts presented credentials as a Member-elect December 5, 1899, but was not sworn owing to protests against his eligibility; the House, on January 5, 1900, adopted a resolution declaring he "ought not to have or hold a seat, and the seat to which he was elected is hereby declared vacant." Mr. King was elected to fill vacancy caused by action of the House, and took his seat April 25, 1900.

[64] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Justin S. Morrill, in preceding Congress, and took his seat December 3, 1900.

[65] Served until March 12, 1900; succeeded by Richard A. Wise, who contested his election.

[66] Successfully contested the election of William A. Young, and took his seat March 12, 1900; died December 21, 1900.

[67] Died March 3, 1900.

[68] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Sydney P. Epes, and took his seat April 28, 1900.

[69] In the preceding Congress memorials were filed remonstrating against the seating of Mr. Scott, December 5, 1899, appeared, qualified, and took his seat, without objection; subsequently other memorials were filed and a resolution was introduced declaring him not entitled to a seat; the Committee on Privileges and Elections was directed to investigate the election, and reported, March 20, 1900, with a resolution declaring Mr. Scott duly elected and entitled to retain the seat; this resolution was agreed to April 27, 1900, by a vote of 52 to 3.

[70] Formed from the territory of the Republic of Hawaii, annexed to the United States by act of July 7, 1898, and granted a Delegate in Congress by act of April 30, 1900.

[71] Took his seat December 15, 1900, after the investigation of charges preferred against him as to eligibility
